Fund manager comment

February has amplified an already very selectivity January. The index is made up of 3 groups. The first one, 10 shares over 50, with good or strong momentum and Year to Date performances spread between 17% and 25%. The other group is made of around 20 companies with returns between 2% to 15%. And in the last one, we find companies that suffered from sometimes good results but with fears about the outlook. There, returns spread from 0% to easily -20%.

On a sector basis, only 3 sectors show clear overperformance, i.e. Auto, Construction and Industrials. The other sectors perform poorly or average. Particularly, Basic resources, Food&Beverage, Utilities and Telecom. The EuroStoxx50 index finished the period with a performance of 4.93% compared with a decline of 5.01% for the fund. Portfolio hedging had a cost of 1.42%. The rest of the negative performance comes from shares that have experienced clear selling pressure from market participants despite good overall quality. The market is showing increased weakness signs. We maintain our hedging in place and expect that a normalisation will allow battered stocks to show some "back to average" dynamic. The hedging should pay back when the index starts a correction that we expect to reach 8 to 9%. Exposure to stocks with better momentum would be increased in this occurrence.
