Fund manager comment

January was a good month for the European market which saw good interest for many of its devalued companies. This trend continues in the first few days of February post results publication. It seems that the interest for the laggards goes in tandem with a more complicated period for the Magnificent 7 in the US. The heavy concentration in few high-performing stocks shows finally some weakness that bodes well for the rest of the market. From a sectoral point of view, Banks and Personal&HLD goods had the leadership whereas the defensive sectors such as Food & Beverage, Telecom, Utilities, Retail and Basic resources were the laggards. The performance for the EuroStoxx50 index was +7.98 %, compared with +4.60 % for the fund. In the past few days of February the fund is catching up. On the volatility side, the 100-days average remained unchanged at 12 % for the fund versus 13.81 % for the market. For 2025, we keep our December comment exactly unchanged, i.e., we are confident that the companies with lower valuations but good balance sheets as we have in the portfolio can experience a clear come back in an environment of further interest rates cuts in Europe.
