Strategy

The objective of this sub-fund is to replicate as closely as possible the rising phases of the market while reducing risk during periods of decline. To achieve this, behavioural finance parameters are used to optimise both the timing of specific and sector-related decisions and the strategic allocations.

Fund manager comment

Despite limited visibility on the US economic data front, markets were driven higher mainly by the AI theme and the correlated energy story that goes with it. Europe is slowly improving on the industrial and particularly on the service dynamic despite the negative effect from the tariffs.

As measured by the EuroStoxx50 index, the market gained over the month + 2.39 % compared with - 0.41 % for the fund. On the volatility side, the 100-days average remained stable for the index at to 13.0 % compared to a still lower level of 7.53 % for the fund.

From a sector perspective, we see the return of a very concentrated market with momentum only in the tech and energy sector and marginally in the Basic Resources. The other sectors were clearly underperforming the index like Auto, Chemicals, Insurance, Media and Leisure for example.

The slowdown that can be derived from partial data in the US is not really impacting a the recovery in Europe.

Moreover, the supreme court decision on tariffs could have some positive impact. Technically, the European market has broken up during the observation phase, and the earning season was not bad at all. We increased the equity exposure keeping in place a structural put to hedge any political risk originated in the US.
